THE DIVIDEND THAT SWELLED THE DEBT.

On the resumption of the investigation of the affairs of the Eric Railway Company yesterday morning all of the committee were present and also Mr. S. L. M. Barlow, counsel for the directors; Mr. William A. Beach, counsel for the stockholders, and Mr. Stick-mey, counsel for the committee. The testimony waich was elicited from the witnesses during the forenoon was not of a very startling nature, out better and more complete achievements were hoped for by the Senators. What are now most carnestly desired are the names of the legislators who were influenced by the money which was used Mr. Watson, president of the company, was present saring most of the session, and looked upon the proceedings with a smiling, but at times rather disturbed countenance.

a director, who testified in relation to the declaration of the dividend. He said :-- I was one of the sour directors who opposed declaring a dividend and voted against it; I had no doubt of the correctness of the financial statement made by the President, but could not agree to distribute among the stockholders money which was needed for reenvertible bonds were to have been devoted to onstruction; I don't know that they were used to pay the dividend; I think, and I give my opinion as a banker, that the commission paid Bischoffs-beim & Co. was excessive. The larger part of the Erie stock is held abroad and the reason for declaring the dividend was the fereign holders of stock the good mit of the change in the directors, and the honest and economical management which the new ones had initiated; I was opposed to the divisend because I thought the net earnings should be used in liquidating the debt and for construction: if there had been no heavy debt I would have voted for the dividend; I believe a considerable sum was spent for "construction;" but I do not think that anything was charged to the construction account that did not add to the permanent value of the property of the Eric Railway; I considered the statement of the net earnings of the road over the signatures of the directors would have the same moral effect in strengthening the stock of the company as the declaration of a dividend, except in London, where such a large amount of the stock is neld; I believe the directors had a legal right to declare the dividend, but I considered that it would have been much better policy to have reduced the floating debt; it is perfectly right for a company, if it has spent its net earnings in extending tracks or other permanent construction, to declare a dividend on the net earnings and pay it out of the sale of new the net earnings and pay it out of the sale of new bonds issued to cover the necessary expenditure; this would of course increase the indebtedness of the company to the amount of the dividend paid; in a company which changed hands very often I consider that the predits for the current time should be distributed among the stockholders or with equal propriety should be used in paying off the floating debt of the company or for permanent improvement; the increased value of stock in the latter cases would indemnify the stockholders for the lack of a dividend; it was represented to me that the disporgings of Gonid were laid aside to pay the floating debt, and hence the earnings could be devoted to paying a dividend; I have no idea of the value that could be realized on the stocks which were restored to the company.

was recalled to be examined in relation to the amount of his profits under the freight contract which he held. He read the following statement of his receipts and expenditures:— Beceipts from the Eric Railway Company for the year 1872. Expenditures for the Eric Railway Company for the year 1872...

Mr. Archer declared emphatically that the contract was not profitable enough to suit him, and that he was anxious to relinquish it. In response to a question by one of the committee he said:—did not say on my former examination that I was losing by this contract, but that I did not want to keep it over to the committee and let them remit on the same terms that you have enjoyed? (Luighter,) witness—Yes, I would, and (excitedity) you could not run it at present prices so that it would pay; the new system of auditing accounts by President Watson has added $5,000 a month to the expenses of the business; there are not brains snewth among the station agents of the Eric Railway to make out the complicated statements insisted on by Watson; the dividend was not carned; during 1872, twenty-six engines were damaged by the fire which destroyed the machine shop, and mone of them have been replaced, enly part of them have been replaced, enly part of them have been replaced, enly part of them have been replaced; they were a year in arream in dividend on their preferred stock and the one and three-quarters per cent dividend on commen stock should have been applied to the arrears on common stock; on the day before the dividend was declared I saw Mr. White in the Eric office and he midd they would have to effect a loan for the company; I have no knowledge of the rate of commission paid for the kind of negotiation which was made by Bischoffsheim & Co.; its object was to bring up the price of stock in the market; I was informed that the new directors who came in were mominated by Bischoffsheim & Co.

To Mr. Barlow—the dividend was based npon Mr. Watson's statement of the affairs of the company; I did not examine the accounts from which it was made, and never saw them; I was Vice President of the Board of Directors from December, 1871, until April, 1872.

To Mr. Baboock—in February, 1872, the project of the South improvement Company was proposed to the save of the contract was made, out the project never was executed; some idea of Afternoom Session.

The committee resumed at four o'clock and proceeded to examine Simon Stephens, who testified as follows:—I reside in the city of New York, and had some connection with the change in Eric road management in March, 1872; on the 12th of March I had a conversation relative to the legality of Mr. Gould's position, and was asked whether it was legal by General Sickles; I said if the company would guarantee to Mr. Gould immunity for his acts he might be induced to resign; I was acting as counsel to Mr. Sickles; I saw Mr. Gould ampresented him with the proposition, asking his resignation and guaranteeing himeertain conditions; he did resign, and I received $2,500 for my services; I heard next day that a large sam of money had been spent in affecting the change; I saw Mr. Sickles in Washington, and he told me that he had received outshers for 368,000; General Sickles said that the result of the overthrow would largely determine the Presidential election; I don't know whether he expected to receive assistance from the government or not; I don't know that General Sickles came over purposely to attend to Eric or not; he had a new wife, and he wanted to show her around; he asked leave of absence had no connection with Eric; he met Mr. Bischoffsheim in London, and the matter was arranged relative to Eric; General Sickles said he hoped some time to become United States Senator, and he thought his action in regard to Eric would hasten the time; I don't know whether he aspired to a higher position or not; I don't know what services Mr. W. E. Chandler performed in connection with his name appearing upon one of the vouchers; Sickles said to me, "What ought I to charge for what I have done?" I said. Brokers got up very bright and early yesterday haunts. There was promise of a field day, and there were many very well informed persons who dency of gold frightened many who, under usual circumstances, might have been considered very easy-going, peaceably-disposed people. But, with all, there was a certain sort of feverish tendency to get excited, which boded no good either to the market or the general community. Parties met each other on street corners, and buttonholed each other very extensively to exchange views as to the state of things. There was a general inter-change of ideas, which, of course, left things prechange of ideas, which, of course, left things pre-cisely in the position they had been before, but which, at all events, proved one fact—that there was something out of the usual way going on, something which everybody would have fixed to be able to foretell.

When the market opened gold went down, and continued to fall by eighths until it got just over into the sixteens. This looked from the beginning very bad for those who had been reported as holding immense quantities of gold in their own interest but against the interest of the community in general. It was whispered around that the gold pool had unloaded and that the members of it were selling out as rapidly as they could. This may have

and which shows that if the original pool burst there was a number of other gentlemen who were quite willing to take the other pool's chances and continue the game. This theory up. It is said, and the HERALD man has it from the all the gold that was offered was speedily bought up. It is said, and the Herald man has it from the best possible authority, that one firm yesterday bought in $20,000,000 of gold and held it. It was also said that Mr. Jay Gould, that great little man, is a silent partner in the firm which consummated this transaction. If this be true, and it no doubt is, Mr. Jay Gould must be at the bottem of this second pool, with the hope to send gold a great deal higher than it has yet been within the past few days. It is pretty certain that though gold did go down to some extent yesterday, and that somebody was hurt, the demand for it was extensive and heavy.

down to some extent yesterday, and that some-body was hurt, the demand for it was extensive and heavy.

THE REASON OF GOLD'S ASCENDANCY.

The chief and most popular reason assigned for the rise in gold is the excess of the imports over the exports. It required no very deep calculation to see that the tremendous imports would cause a proportionate demand for the preclous metal. The question was with those who bought it up when they saw the demand coming, whether they would be strong enough to carry it. With imports transcending by millions the exports the use of gold becomes imperative, and it must be bought. Those who hold it under these circumstances ought to be able to exact their own terms, and, to some extent, they have done so. But the demand usually fails a little toward the middle of the week, and it may have been allowed to fall slightly so as to rise all the higher as the demand increases for the departure of the Saturday steamers for Europe. These are the opinions of men on Wall street, who pretend to know, and have every opportunity of knowing, what they talk about. To these it seems most probable that gold will not fall below the lowest price paid yesterday, but that it will continue to rise. Others who argue in the same strain still further add that so long as our railroads keep up the price of freights as they have lately been doing, the imports must continue to be greatly in excess of the exports.

THE FARMERS OF THE WEST
cannot afford to ship their produce East at the enormous prices which are demanded by the railroads for ireights; and, in the meantime, not only they themselves suffer, but the railroads and the people suffer almost equally with them. The only class which is benefited are the buils who, without conscence—a thing it seems ridiculous to look for nowadays—trade on the necessities of the public. This has come to be such a usual kind of speculation that it is hardly looked necessities of the public. This has come to be such a usual kind of speculation that it is hardly looked upon any longer as sinful and wrong. The merchants, it is true, suffer severely; but, after all, the real loss will react upon the people at last, who will have to buy the articles at an increased rate and pay their hard-earned money therefor. That is, unless, as during the war, societies be organized to resist the sale of foreign importations; but this so, of course, too ridiculous to be seriously discussed.

The Herald man saw a preminent financier in Wall street yesterday, and asked him his opinion wail street yesterdiay, and asked him his opinion about this gold matter which is setting so many people by the ears. This gentleman said that in the present state of affairs, with speculators able at any moment to ruin honest men, there was no help for it and things and to go on a they had gone. But this gentleman said the had a stepped.

He ade that he thought he knew of a way in which gold synbhing might be stopped.

"Supposes he said, "that the Custom House were to be set the said, and the thought he knew of a way in which gold synbhing might be stopped.

"Suppose he said, "that the Custom House were to the said of the ceeded in becoming very unpopular with the mercantile and financial classes. But it seems that at labt he is preparing to make some movement towards reheving the monetary pressure. During the past two days Mr. Richardson has received two bushel baskets of telegraphic despatches from prominent merchants and business men asking in the most pitcous manner for help. It is, no doubt, this which has caused him to make some.

MOVEMENT TOWARDS RELIEVING THE PRESSURE. His proposal to sell $6,000,000 of gold during the month is said to be of no avail, because he withdraws from circulation its equivalent in greenbacks, and that makes matters worse than ever. But yesterday afternoon a despatch was received from Washington saying, is answer to a message asking for information on this point, that Secretary Richardson had been closeted with President Grant for some hours in the atternoon, and that the result of the contabulation was that Secretary Richardson was about to issue immediately $10,000,000 in greenbacks to relieve the financial necessity of the hour. An interview with the Assistant Treasurer at this city.

SENERAL HILHOUSE,

Brought a statement from that gentleman that this statement of the issue of $10,000,000 was altogether a mistake, and that no such transaction had been as yet ordered. The $10,000,000 spoken of would not be a new issue of greenbacks from the Treasury in Washington, but simply an issue of a sum to that amount which has lain dormant in the Sub-Treasury in this city since it was sent some time since to pay off the three per cent loan. This was done without using the greenback spoken of, and the mooney has not since been touched.

The effect of any such action on Wallstreet would undoubtedly be to relieve the money pressure, but gold would be sent up still higher than it has been. In Wall street yesterday, in consequence of the excitement, there were

ONLY TWO FAILURES.

Outside of Wall street proper it is the general impression that the day be been touched. The effect of any such action on Wallstr

Mme. Hazard's Latest Reception.

At Mme. Hazard's reception on Monday evening at 52 University place, a large number of artists and literary characters were present. Music, recitations and tableaus pleasantly varied the evening. Miss Benziger sang the "Slumber Song." and played the transcription by Liszt, from "Rigoletto." Mine. Hazard represented Rome in the tablean of that name, and sang "L'Esperance," a composition of her own. Miss Ferretti Interpreted "Casta Diva" and a romance by Mine. Hazard, entitled, "I am Going to Die." Miss Proudioot rendered a scene from "Evadne" (the one which is supposed to take place in the Hall of Statues) and one from "London Assurance," and, with the assistance of Mr. Pope, gave the quarrel scene from "The School for Scandal." Mr. Pope read "Papa's Grave" and "The Fire Flend." Mr. Carrozzi played a Roman march and Mr. Goffrie a violin solo. The rooms were crowded and the statuary gallery was the theme of general comment.
